COUNCIL ACTS ON PART-PAY
RELIEF PLAN

Use State Money Now,
Provide City Matching Funds Later.

The council last night took steps to secure relief on a part-pay basis for the next few months by using state relief funds.

The action came at a regular meeting of city hall and followed a conference between Mayor Snare and state relief officials yesterday. The mayor was to go to Columbus today to confer with the state welfare department on plans for raising adequate relief funds.

Last night's step, which Mayor Snare had and the sanction of Dr. Van Schock, relief expert of the state auditor's office, included appropriation of $10,000 for payment of receiving monthly grants from the state.

The appropriation was made on the basis of a certification from City Auditor Elmer Shaw that the city would be expected to grant the city $10,000 for relief at various times in 1940. It had been originally planned to appropriate the full $10,000, but some members of council expressed the fear that the larger amount would be frantically spent away more rapidly than a smaller sum.

Funds Due Soon

Although the $10,000 appropriated last night is not in the city banks as cash, Mayor Snare said that it will be, since the state will continue to make grants each month to Marion as in the past.

Since the state relief laws require that cities match the state's relief grants, Marion will have to find funds in the next few months to do this, the mayor said.

In the past the city has matched the state grants in advance, but the new plan makes it possible to lay the way to delay supplying matching funds and still receive state help. The mayor explained that the appropriation of $10,000 will show up in reports to the state and will insure the city's standing in state funds, at least for a few months.

The state has been paying about 40 per cent of relief costs and the city has been finding funds for the remaining 60 per cent. Last year total relief costs were about $10,000 and this year they are expected to be at least that much, the mayor said.

Where Marion's funds for matching the state grants will come from is still an unsolved problem.

Hopes for State Action

Mayor Snare said last night he hopes the legislature will take some action before long to ease the financial problems in many areas of the state.

The new plan, however, will enable the city to pay its relief bills approximately a 40 per cent plus, and adequate local funds are found. It is planned to pay salaries of relief workers in full and provide the remainder of the state funds to actual relief costs. Later, when full funds are on hand, the accumulated deficit will be paid off, the mayor said.

Another piece of relief legislation last night was passage of a measure adding two investigators and a part time stenographer to the relief staff. The workers were added previously, so the legislation was merely a formality. No additional workers will be used in the new investigation of relief cases starting today.

Councilman Hayse Rogers asked the mayor if the investigators pay their way by cutting off existing relief cases and the mayor replied that he believed they could. Clerk Walter Guthrie said that once investigators are succeeded in cutting the relief cases from 700 to 400 cases in six months' time.

The council also told how recently during the severe cold wave about 30 needy persons came to the mayor's office and demanded aid. The mayor granted aid, but was later found that Accompanying them on the motor trip were two stars of the silent screen, Rod La Rocque and his wife, Vilma Banky.

Marshall was divorced in Las Vegas two weeks ago by Edna Best, English actress, who was married a few minutes later to Nat Wolff, Hollywood agent. Mrs. Russell has done bit work in pictures and has been Marshall's companion for months at Hollywood social affairs.

FINNISH LOAN VOTE SPEEDED

House Meets Early To Assure Final Action on Measure Today.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—House leaders headed for quick action on the Finnish loan bill today by determining to obtain passage in a single session.

They called the members together an hour early, and forecast a final vote late in the afternoon. Overwhelming approval was expected.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, would increase capital of the export-import bank by $100,000,000, but Jesse Jones, the federal loan administrator, has indicated that Finland would be given a $20,000,000 slice for non-military materials.

Norway and Sweden also are on the bank's waiting list for loans of $10,000,000 each.

Senate in Recess

The senate decided to recess until Thursday after approving yesterday a $107,079,000 appropriation bill for the state, commerce and justice departments. The total was $146,600 less than the house figure and represented an aggregate reduction of $2,585,010 below the President's budget.

Administration forces blocked a group headed by Senator Lodge (R-Mass.) from deleting the $17,000 salary for the United States ambassador at Moscow.

The house also passed an appropriation bill yesterday, voting $90,009,134 for various deficiency funds. Included was $60,000,000 for additional farm benefit payments. The bill's total was $4,020,704 below the budget estimate.

The vote followed lengthy criticism by Republicans of questions to be asked in the 1940 census.

Five-Inch Snowfall Here Sets Record for Season

77 City, County and State Highway Workers Kept Busy Clearing Streets and Roads.

The heaviest snowfall of the winter blanketed Marion city and county today, bringing an abrupt halt to spring's sunny preview and making streets and highways dangerous.

More snow flurries and lower temperatures tonight are predicted in the official government forecast. Generally fair skies and "somewhat lower" temperatures are forecast for tomorrow.

Heavy snowfalls were reported throughout the state today by the Associated Press.

The bill, already passed by the Senate, would increase capital of the export-import bank by $100,000,000, but Jesse Jones, the federal loan administrator, has indicated that Finland would be given a $20,000,000 slice for non-military materials.

FOUR-DAY COOKING SCHOOL OPENS IN STAR AUDITORIUM

All paths led to The Marion Star auditorium today where Mrs. E. H. Elmers Smith, home economics instructor, opened The Star's fifteenth annual cooking school. Scores of women were on hand when the doors opened at 12:30 o'clock and hundreds were in their places when Mrs. Smith walked onto the platform and into her pleasant temporary kitchen.

Early arrivals had ample time to view the various interesting displays and the very newest exhibits of home equipment and the freshest and most appetizing foods in the booths near the entrance to the auditorium.

Pencils and pads were much in evidence, proving that the women have some ideas of their own which Mrs. Smith will have to straighten out this morning.

Others complained about questions concerning mortgages, interest on loans, and whether families share their baths with others.

"The demand for this information," shouted Taber, "comes from the bureaucrats who believe in regimentation and who have no regard for the rights or the money of the American people."

Rep. Rankin (D-Miss.) accused the Republicans of using the census to make a general attack on the Roosevelt administration. Other Democrats contended that the close questioning of citizens for statistical purposes was nothing new.

The vote followed lengthy criticism by Republicans of questions to be asked in the 1940 census.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 27—

Only a comparative handful of voters trudged through snow—in some places a half-foot deep—today to elect short-term representatives in Ohio's 17th and 22nd congressional districts.

COLUMBUS, Feb. 27—Special congressional elections in two Ohio districts today served as "steaws in the wind" for the nation's political observers seeking to gauge New Deal popularity.

Light voting was anticipated in the six-county 17th district and the three-county 22nd where successors to two congressmen who died in office were chosen.

In the 17th district Byron B. Ashbrook, Democratic Johnstown banker, opposed J. Harry McGregor of Coshocton, Republican floor leader in the Ohio house of representatives, for the post vacated by the death of Ashbrook's uncle, Rep. William A. Ashbrook.

French Warplanes
and Other Arms
Go To Rumania

By The Associated Press

BUCHAREST, Feb. 27—Three secret agreements whereby France will supply Rumania with large quantities of warplanes, machine guns and other armaments were reported today.

Signing of the contracts was reported unofficially as a Rumanian finance commission returned from Paris.

Britain, it also was learned, already has flown 60 spotters pursuit ships and Bristol Blenheim bombers to this country.

The French and British action was described as following upon receipt of assurances from Rumania that Germany would not be favored in exports of Rumanian oil.

This produced some uneasiness here as to Germany's future action toward Rumania, particularly in view of the expected arrival of a German economist this week to seek more oil.

Meanwhile, Italian negotiators began conferences with observers believed might develop into a Balkan economic contest with Germany.

British planes "operating over central Germany penetrated air far as Berlin," the communiqué declared. Flights also were reported over western Germany and Holland.

The air ministry said last Thursday it "was not generally known," but British planes had flown over Berlin "more than once" since the start of the war.

Most informed circles held the belief that Italy was seeking to nudge out Germany and resell Rumanian goods in world markets for gold.

The probability of a German protest appeared following Rumania's announcement of railway freight rate increases of 12 to 40 per cent on all exports except grain.

British planes "operating over central Germany penetrated air far as Berlin," the communiqué declared. Flights also were reported over western Germany and Holland.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which their tact, shrewdness and mental stability will enable them to meet an unforeseen and exciting trend of events, in which social, emotional or romantic angles are stressed. This dramatic or intriguing situation may demand a sudden disruption of current affairs, which, if shrewdly handled, may culminate in great satisfaction and solid benefits as well.

LEAP BEFORE YOU LOOK

By Peggy O'More

CHAPTER ONE

'Look Before You Leap'

TOMI TOLAND would always remember that afternoon as a period of calm before the storm.

True, there was a storm outside, but that was a mere gale which howled from Lake Michigan to dash sheet against the windows and pile snow on the ledges.

Within the offices of Mid-Western Fruits, Incorporated, there hovered a portentous calm. Radiators sizzled contentedly; from the outer office came the lethargic rhythm of a dozen typewriters, and even Johnny, coming in from the street with the Market Edition, failed to slam the door.

Tomi glanced at the clock. The hands hovered encouragingly near the hour of five. She looked over her shoulder. Her employer, A. J. Morris, was comfortably slumped behind his newspaper.

"Now, if he'll just stay that way," thought Tomi, "I'll reach home on time for a change."

Stealthily she brought from her desk mirror to be braced in the typewriter carriage; a powderpuff to be rubbed over the smooth planes of her cheeks, and a lipstic.

The lipstic was poised, ready to add further defiance to a mutinous mouth, when A. J. barked, "Tomi!"

Tomi jumped and the lipstic missed its mark.

"Yes, A. J.," she answered, resignedly, reaching for a paper handkerchief and wondering why he always waited until five minutes of five to hold a conference with her.

"Tomi, ever hear of a fellow named Timothy Toland?"

Tomi's mirror revealed startled black eyes and a distinctly crimson nose. "Yes," she admitted. "I had a great-uncle by that name. He died a month ago."

"Worth anything?" pursued A. J.

Tomi smiled. "According to the family, he wasn't worth powder to blow him up. He was the black ram of the Tolands.

Aside from your private secretary, Mr. Morris, he was the only member of an old and honorable clan of gray gray hairs on the pates of his elders."

"Must have been a nice fellow," chuckled Morris. "Did you ever meet him?"

Tomi, her nose again becomingly sheathed in power. Instead of lipstic, turned around. "Rather," she confessed. "He spent few weeks with us about a year ago. We both ran true form. We fought from the moment we met until we parted. It was lots of fun. But why this 'cakewalk'?"

Morris rustled the newspaper. "Little piece in here about him. Seems his will's about to be offered for probate. A fellow by the name of Bartell, an attorney, is here from California to settle the estate. He's the administrator."

Tomi read the article Morris passed to her. It carried an Alameda, California, dateline and stated that Bartell was flying to Chicago to confer with the heirs.

"That can't be my Uncle Timothy," she gasped. "The regular old money didn't have anything to will anyone. Why, I—" she stopped short.

Morris grinned at her. "Come on, tell us, how much did you loan him?"

"Not a cent," replied Tomi.

Immediately Tomi decided she hated this man.

firmy, she hurried to her lock-wor, a slim figure in pearl-green wool, black hair severely cut, straight black brows like menacing guards to alert black eyes.

She hadn't learned Uncle Timothy anything, she defended. But he had looked so steady and pale that last evening, she decided she didn't need a spring coat and had slipped fifty dollars into his hand and made him promise he would take a berth instead of a chair car and eat nourishing meals.

Morris was watching for her when she reappeared, a small green hat riding triumphantly on the glossy black hair, a fur coat pulled high about a determined chin, and galooshes buttoned snugly about trim ankles.

Living In Yesterday

"In a hurry?" he leered. "Tomi, look at him and shake her head in exasperation. "A. J., you know Great-aunt Hannah makes the family wait for their dinner until every member is there and seated. This is mutton night and I can't eat cold mutton."

"Ugh," shuddered Morris. "And why do you put up with it? Tomi? It's all right for the full-blown Tolands to bow to the mudlarch, but you're only half-Toland. You had ten years!"

"Ten years as a guttersnipe?" Inquired Tomi, pertly. "Only, in France we called them gamins. It was fun," she murmured dreamily. "I was too young to understand why my father's death. He was just another Yankee captain who went down under a Boche bullet. I was four when Mimi died. After that life was one long stretch of freedom and trying to find bread to soak in the gravy I'd hope to have."

"Oh, well—" she straightened and began pulling on her gloves. "It insight me lots of things. How to look out for myself first, and then the other fellow. How to laugh off insults. You know, A. J., I can laugh off anything."

"But five!"

"You're certainly had plenty of practice in that family," interposed Morris. "They've never given you a decent break."

"Yes, they have. They didn't have to spend years trying to locate a child who was only half-Toland. And, looked at from their viewpoint, you know I've given them a lot of bad moments since they found me and brought me to Chango. I'm the only member of the family save Timothy, rest his soul, who hasn't been brought to Great-aunt Hannah's heel. And if I don't get away from here right now—" She fled from the laughing Morris.

The elevator carried her swiftly to the street; wind and crowds buffeted her. She ran up the stairway to the elevated and crushed into the narrow aisle.

Swaying along with the other snow-damp passengers, she thought longingly of a downtown apartment, steam heated; of a tiny white kitchenette where she could prepare her own food; of freedom from family consciousness of friends she could invite there, without their first having to be checked in the ultra-conservative blue book.

Cataapulted out on the South Side, she raced against the wind. She had completed her financial obligation to the family.

Everything from her fare to the States to her board and early schooling, had been repaid. Much against the wishes of the Tolands, she had taken a business course and paid for it herself.

The Tolands lived in yesterday. They had money enough to remain there, undisturbed. The old estate before which Tomi stopped was encrusted with tenebrions. The Tolands closed their eyes to this encroachment; denied its existence. Tomi admired this quality of self-sufficiency, even while she squirmed under its heavy domination.

"And," piped Harold, May's scrapping son, "Tomi said she took her old-fashioned with lemon peel."

Tomi's slim ankles went up the stairs in full flight. Darn such a family, she thought. Why did they always manage to make her look the fool before strangers?

"Something appropriate to the occasion," she mumbled and her eyes began to twinkle.

Uncle Timothy once remarked that her mind was as streamlined as her figure. Well, she had a flame-colored frock which would establish the accuracy of Timothy's observation.

Judson opened the door and immediately Tomi knew that something unusual was going on. All five globes in the chandelier were burning.

That chandelier was the Toland social barometer. One globe meant the normal pursuance of life; two indicated that relatives or guests were under the roof; three had burned at the arch-bishop's visit; and far back in Tomi's memory was a vision of four globes burning at May's belated wedding.

"But five!"

Flamingo

THIE butter had disappeared. Tomi contemplated going to her room. Then, hearing voices, she slipped to the door of the front parlor and peered in.

Front and back parlors had been thrown into one room, and dressed in deepest mourning, the family sat lined about the walls like a gigantic funeral wreath.

"Tim," Great-aunt Hannah's heavy voice boomed out, "Here, instantly!"

Reflex action, the outgrowth of habit, sent Tomi flying to obey. Down the long waxed floor of the hall she sped, to wheel at the door of the rear parlor and, as she wheeled, to lockdown. Below her, crouched, ready to spring, was Ming Toy; Ming Toy, the Pekinese, with his penchant for stockings well filled with ankles.

Tomi sprang into the air. She came down, her foot on a throw rug. The rug, traveling under her momentum, slid swiftly into the parlor. Arms wide-spread, hat over one eye and with one foot still elevated, Tomi came to a belated stop in the arms of a strange man.

Her mind photographed every detail of his appearance. He was tall. He had broad shoulders. He had crisp wavy hair which came to the center of his brow in a sharp peak, then, contrarily, swept back on either side. It was light brown with a hint of gold in it.

And his eyes? They were clear gray-blue with golden tints of laughter in them.

"Laughter?" Tomi's motto had been, "Be nonchalant; laugh first." She hadn't had time. She decided she hated this man.

"Tom!" came the outraged voice of Great-aunt Hannah.

Tomi regained her balance with a sharp click of her heels and flipped her hat to a less virile angle. "Yes, Aunt Hannah," she questioned, dutifully. "Will you never learn to look before you leap?"

Tomi looked at the voluminous skirts which swept the floor around Hannah Toland's chair, and answered sweetly, "If Ming Toy ever learns that you don't go around on wheels, you'll leap too."

There was one sharp, quickly controlled laugh, then deep silence, broken by Major John Toland's gruff voice. "Apologize

Reforestation of Ohio "Tin Roof" Farms Urged To Restore Fertility

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 27.—If you live on a "tin roof" farm in a "rural slum"—try raising trees for a living; you might get back in the self-supporting class.

Dr. J. A. Hall, director of the federal central states forest experiment station here, declared today:

"City residents through relief are supporting thousands of land owners, and I don't mean farmers, in hilly sections of the Ohio valley and central states. I say invest that relief money in forests and rebuild an economic structure for them. There should not be rural slums."

A "tin roof" farm, Hall said, was the result of deforestation and poor land use—barren ridges from which rain water runs off to form a roof.

"There is a lot of ground that used to grow good hardwoods and timber now that it can grow only low grade pine trees," said Hall.

Ridge row is a worry, he said, when trees are cut down, an economic timber congress will give him for land purchase, laboratory work and assistance in mapping a forest program for Ohio.

Hall advocated purchase of hill land unfit for farming, planting of great forests where the present population could remain and find work in a rejuvenated wood-working industry. He also urged farmers to devote more land and attention to woodlots, adding that he knew of some which had yielded an annual return to owners of $5 an acre for 25 years.

Instead of a farmer's having 100 acres of cultivated land and 20 acres of timber, many would be better off financially with 100 number and 20 in cultivation, Hall asserted.

"The prospects of the being a prosperous and successful farmer are greater if he grows more wood to supply his own needs," said Hall, adding that American railroads use 50,000,000 crosses annually and 40,000,000 to 500,000,000 fence posts. A cross-tie is worth 90 cents to a southern Ohio farmer, he said.

"It is a means of earning some through timber sale employment in woodworking industries. Reforestation would bolster the nation's water," said Hall, who termed the general a water shortage many sections.

"The natural litter of a is the best infiltration agent. It prevents runoff, floods, maintains the water and keeps springs and alive," he asserted.

Reciprocity Hull

COLLAPSE of what was reported to be strong wall opposition to extending State Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade program for three more years seems to be producing tears of joy and sorrow in about equal proportions. If the Senate follows the house lead and votes for extension, with no strings attached, Mr. Hull might even emerge as a presidential probability—instead of just a possibility.

Reciprocity is a triumph for idealism. It is the theoretically proper way to conduct trade relations. It is fair. It is just. It is all the good things that the college professors and economists say it is. It is a step in the right direction. There is, in fact, just one thing wrong with it.

That's the fact it works so much better on paper than it does in practice. In a world crammed with nations tumbling over one another to exchange goods to their mutual advantage, reciprocity would be fool-proof. It would be as practical as Christianity in a world filled with Christians. But in a world filled neither with Christians nor nations anxious to do business on a basis of mutual profit, Christianity and reciprocity both are ideals that leave something to be desired when the other fellow wants to play rough.

All of which has no bearing on what now looks like a great personal triumph for Mr. Hull—Reciprocity Hull, he was known as in the days of the New Deal.

Little Day That Wasn't There

THIS is the week that contains the day that wasn't there and must be set apart from plain, ordinary weeks.

Feb. 20, next Thursday, will be like all days in February, neither very good nor very bad. It will be 24 hours long, according to the clock, and noon will come in the middle of it.

All over the world people will go about their daily business, not particularly impressed, unless they happen to know someone who was born on Feb. 20, sometime in the past and now in only 12 years old, instead of showing 80.

All this complacency is the only crumb of hope the calendar reformers can pick up in their search for converts. Every fourth year since 48 B. C. a day has popped out of nowhere simply because the astronomers of Julius Caesar told him that was the way it should be. It's a stirring testimonial to human capacity for new ideas that after 1,988 years no one thinks much about it any more.

Britain's Jobs—In Order

THERE are two things the British empire must do, says Prime Minister Chamberlain in the most explicit statement of war aims since the war started.

It must prevent a German war victory. When that is done it must do, with help from other countries, what wasn't done after the previous war—establish collective security based on mutual goodwill. There are no other aims.

The prime minister doesn't state them quite so concisely, choosing to talk about preventing world domination by Germany, righting wrongs, reestablishing Poland and Czechoslovakia, abolishing the spirit of militarism and flailing Russia brutally—but it must be remembered Mr. Chamberlain is speaking for effect as well as enlightenment.

First British job is to win the war; that is the first thought of all belligerents. Second job is to make a peace that will last, which is not usually anything more than a remote consideration while war is in progress. Yet, the kind of peace that can be made is determined by the kind of war that precedes it. The better Europe Mr. Chamberlain foresees can be no better than the material from which it must be made: i.e., the war-scarred populations that will emerge from the conflict.

This has disturbed many observers, who have cried in despair that the only result of another war will be another peace like the last one. Apparently the British are beset by the same misgivings. It is an encouraging sign that they are mentioning peace not as the automatic result of war but as part of the war problem, itself.

Revenge Will Be Sweet

COMMONEST street scene during this interlude of slush has been a hapless pedestrian surveying the damage done to his clothing by a passing car, truck, or bus. When the pedestrian happens to be a lady whose stockings and day dress both have been ruined, it's a tragic scene indeed.

There's not much to do about it. It's an accident that could happen to anyone. The drivers mean no harm, but on second thought there is something to do about it—a kind of escape into the dream world of next summer...

When pedestrians will be squirting water on their lawns and motorists will be passing by with car windows open. A little slip of the hose, oops, and somebody's going to get wet. The sprinklers mean no harm. It's an accident that could happen to anyone.

News Behind the News

Vandenbergs Only Presidential Candidate Who Has Outlined Complete Platform.

By PAUL MALLON

This is the second weekly column of purely personal news and views presented in an effort to answer the question: "What kind of a president would be made?"

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, a younger Borah with the rasping voice and classical style, is the only candidate, Republican or Democrat, who had made it fully clear what kind of a president he proposes to be.

Vandenbergs has been here throughout the New Deal, working in the senate on his legislation. He knows what it is all about, and what he wants to do about it. His working representation on the scene has established him as a sound liberal whose primary purpose is to effect a "coalition of distinction" gathering in all forces against the neutrality bill. It was not by chance that he inherited Senator Borah's desk, and Borah's offices when the great nationalist champion died. He will walk firmly in Borah's beaten path.

The Ishoan was perhaps his best friend in the senate. He chums also with the Republican floor leader, Charles McNary, and Senator Nye of North Dakota, although he is not the glib handshaking type. He would know how to handle congress, but he has few intimates there, no brazen trust, writes his own speeches, and does most of his own thinking, units which have not endeared him to all the Republican political leaders. Some still hold against him his vigorous stand to take second place on the Landon ticket last time. But that, at least, has permitted him to go this far without abandoning himself with promises. He would get the unanimous support of the party. His secretary of state for instance might very well be Herbert Hoover's assistant secretary, William Castle.

Nobie-Kiser. His platform has been formed accordingly. He would scratch out only those phrasés of the Roosevelt revolution which are rather widely considered to be unsound. He would, for example, revise, but not completely overthrow, the existing farm policies, maintain relief with federal money under state control, ditch the Hull trade treaty program, substituting a mercantile tariff making on a coat of production basis, limit the unemployment and old age taxes to a pay-as-you-go basis, but maintain the benefit payments.

He would be a cutter and a mender—not a sweater.

13 Points. He has laid it all out in detail in 10 points of his St. Paul speech. Profiting from the experience of his opponent, Tom Dewey, who went to the twin cities and delivered a forceful criticism of New Deal faults without proposing specific action, Vandenberg set forth his complete platform in his Lincoln Day address at St. Paul.

Purpored down, the Vandenberg program is simply this:

Lay off business. Repeal protective tax regulations. Get the freezing band of SEC off the capital finance market. Work the opposite way. Adopt incentive tax schemes, whereby business would get tax deduction allowances for plant expansion, building, employing more people.

Don't stop benefit payments to farmers for soil conservation, but let the farmers decide voluntarily what they want to plant. Institute a program of abundance rather than curtailment, and dispose of the surplus products in foreign markets under the old McNary-Haugen domestic allotment plan.

Eyes on Near East

Massed Allied Troops May Mean Italy Is on Their Side.

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—An important Washington military authority told us when the war first started that the moment Britain and France began organizing an expeditionary force in the near east you could bank on one thing—Italy was on the side.

His reasoning was this: France and England never would risk sending an expeditionary force to the near east as long as Italy remained a threat to the line of communications through the Mediterranean. An expeditionary force whose supply lines could be cut off on short notice by Italy would be in an extremely vulnerable position, even if it were granted that the combined British-French fleets soon could liquidate the Italian fleet.

Now France and England have organized a force in the near east variously reported at 300,000 to 300,000 men. It doesn't wholly prove the case, however, for only about 30,000 Australians and New Zealanders are really "expeditionary." The others are mostly native troops.

Nevertheless, it is considered here as a strong indicator of the drift.

Fortune Question. Washington's best story—Republ

"Even before Adam," retorted the engineer, "the Lord found only chaos, and from it created the moon, stars, sun and separated the land from the water. That was an engineering job."

"Yeah," drawled the economist, "but who created chaos?"

REDS LAUNCH NEW ADVANCE ON FINNS

Goering Might Bring Peace If Hitler Steps Out

Start from Captured Islands at End of Line.

Associated Press
PARIS, Feb. 27.—The invading army, after having taken the fortified islands of the Archipelago, now has launched attacks on other islands in the northern part of the bay of Bothnian command area.

Operations also continued across the isthmus of Karelia, driving toward Viborg, where fighting Finn-Soviet Somme, Nakkijarvi, and Ayrapaajarvi and Sodankylä, the high command said.

The general idea of Herr Hitler retiring from the picture for one reason or another isn't so fanciful, based on the following points:

Smash Hitler Is Aim

That the allies appear to be chiefly interested in smashing Hitler the individual, and his code, to which they attribute the fall of Europe. This must be qualified by saying that they have been vague as to whether they would stand for a revised totalitarian rule under some one like Goering. But they have indicated that the German people can write their own political ticket, provided they chuck overboard Hitlerism.

That under the circumstances there are only two ways in which Hitler can secure peace—either by defeating the allies or by removing himself from the scene.

That the allies believe if Hitler persists in this war his own people ultimately will break under the privations of the blockade and make peace on their own account.

Goering Is Loyal

In fairness to Goering we should dismiss one of our inquiries at once. It is the type of personality whom one would expect to be ambitious, but there never has been the slightest evidence that he isn't utterly loyal to his chief and wholly devoted to his führer's interests.

The suggestion that Herr Hitler might immolate himself is indeed a racy bit to roll beneath the tongue. He is an utter egomaniac. He has made it clear that he believes he has been divinely ordained to carry out his program for the fatherland. He has accepted the tribute of those who regard him not only as their political but spiritual leader and call him a messiah.

A car driven by Mrs. Lucile Haines of near West Mansfield skidded into an auto driven by Hubert C. Shelton of the Richland like as the latter was making a left turn from Orchard street onto West Center street about 3:30 p.m., police said. Both cars were damaged.

Seeing men running across the street, Reese investigated and discovered that the roof of the Lester Milligan home was ablaze. A ladder and other equipment were taken from the truck and the blaze was soon extinguished. Fireman Reese continued on his way to Prospect.

CHURCHILL REPORTS TWO NAZI SUBS SUNK

FRANCE TAKES CONTROL OF ALL FARM WORKERS

Lays Plans To Hasten Spring Planting.

By The Associated Press
PARIS, Feb. 27.—The French government today ordered all the nation's farm workers requisitioned, holding them to the soil under military control to assure the spring planting.

A notice issued by the ministries of agriculture and production said that "agricultural production delayed by the severe winter must be intensified so that provisioning of the country will not be compromised."

The requisition decree forbade business and industries to hire workers away from the farms without special permission.

COUNCIL

about 10 orders had gone to undersigned cases.

Other Council Action

Other action by council last night included the following:

A motion was passed requesting an advance draw of funds from the county auditor for general operation. This will place needed cash in the city's coffers, the mayor explained.

An ordinance was passed, in line with a previous petition authorizing plans, specifications and cost estimates to be prepared for improvement of Latourette street between Brown and Jackson avenues with a concrete curb and gutter.

Action on requests for two property transfers was delayed until the next meeting. They were for a property at Pennsylvania avenue and Church street and lot one at 481 Park Boulevard. Owners of each are seeking to be included in the commercial zone.

The Marion Water Co. requested permission to lay six sections of water main as follows: 188 feet of six-inch pipe on Farmington street east of Greenwood; 108 feet of two-inch pipe on Colmar court, bin court north of Elgin court; 450 feet of two-inch pipe on Elgin court from Park boulevard to Olney avenue; 270 feet of two-inch pipe on Bradford street south of Lafayette; 450 feet of six-inch pipe on Clover street; 234 feet of two-inch pipe on Sharp and Hayes streets.

The request was referred to the ordinance and franchise, water works and fire departments and street and alley committees.

Wants Hydrants Moved

In line with this, Councilman Don R. Biggett called attention to a report that there is a fire hydrant in a sort of a pasture north of McKinley street between Olney avenue and Park boulevard.

He said it appears to be doing no good back there and wondered if it could be moved to a place of advantage. He referred to the recent request of the Marion Metal Products Co. of 413 Monroe street for more adequate fire protection. Council President Robert Stell also said he heard there is a hydrant on the Johnson street extension north of Wilson.

Council again took up the question of the E. A. Eastman Truck Line, located at 105 Henry street, which recently was objected to by residents of the vicinity as a nuisance.

Councilman Rogers, head of one of the committees which has been selected to investigate the complaint, said the committee found the statements in the objecting petition were a true picture of existing conditions. He said he felt the matter should be referred to the city solicitor for legal advice and this was done after more discussion.

Councilman Harry Wilhelm said he would "have to have a condition like that in my back yard."

Defends Trucking Co.

Mr. Eastman, operator of the truck concern, was in the gallery and made several statements in support of his operations at the location.

He said it was true the company's trucks drove over the walks for about a week and then no more. As to debris which residents complained of, he said it had been there for six or eight weeks.

Mr. Eastman, answering charges that his trucks and men operated late at night, said that his last truck leaves at about 7 or 7:30 p.m., and the first comes in at 6 or 8 a.m. He said that once they worked until 10 or 11 p.m.

Councilman M. Basil Williams asked why Mr. Eastman had moved from a location on Beloit Avenue to the Henry street address. Mr. Eastman said he had been assured by the former owner that the Henry street property was in the commercial zone.

Mr. Eastman wondered why the neighbors could not go together and buy the objectionable property and make a playground or park out of it and then "everybody would be happy."

Raises Pension Question

Raising up another matter, Councilman Williams asked about police and firemen living outside of Marion on city pensions. He said "it just looks funny to me that there is no rule whereby continuation of a pension would be contingent on residence in Marion."

He pointed out the pensions are financed by Marion taxes and wondered if the money should be spent.

Councilman Rogers differed with him and said that regardless of where the pensioners live, the money should still be due.

THREE DEAD IN SHOOTING

AKRON, O., Feb. 27.—Police today recorded a third death in Akron's week-end "family" shooting. Russell Faule, 33, died of a head wound self-inflicted after he slew his two children, Mary Jane, 2, and Walter, 7. Double services for the children will be held tomorrow.

WOMAN FINED $200 ON 2ND DRUNK DRIVING OFFENSE

Mrs. Edith Anderson, 45, of 675 West Center street who was found guilty of a drunken driving charge by Municipal Judge Hazen last week was fined $200 and costs and given a suspended 10 day county jail sentence yesterday. Her driving rights were revoked for one year.

Court officials said the fact it was her second offense was taken into consideration when the sentence was passed.

Mrs. Anderson was arrested by police last month following a traffic accident on West Center street in which a car allegedly driven by her was involved.

Germany. Two have been captured, and another, the Orizaba, was reported last night to have sunk after striking a shoal near Hammerfest, Norway.

British and neutral shipping losses for the week ending Sunday night were reported by British authorities as the lowest of any week in the war. Four British ships of 17,778 tons and three neutrals of 8,850 tons were reported sunk.

The report was in contrast with the previous week, in which losses of five British and 15 neutral ships, with total tonnage of 80,776, were the war's highest for one week.

British Shoot Down Two Nazi Raiders

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The air ministry announced today that two raiding German planes had been shot down off Britain's coasts as the German air force apparently resumed its widespread coastal raiding.

The report was in contrast with the previous week, in which losses of five British and 15 neutral ships, with total tonnage of 80,776, were the war's highest for one week.

Artillery Fire Rattles Luxembourg

BRUSSELS, Feb. 27.—Artillery fire of increased intensity was reported to be shaking houses of the frontier villages of neutral little Luxembourg today while heavy German troop movements were sighted across the Moselle (Mosel) river.

Unusually heavy road and rail traffic was visible across the river. A steady stream of cavalry, cyclists, infantry, ammunition and food columns have been noticeable since Saturday.

The Obermosel Zeitung said barracks had sprung up over night halfway between Nennig and Beaufort in the Rhineland region.

Observers could not say whether the German troops moving southward were maneuvering or reinforcing troops in the Saar section.

Eyewitnesses said they had seen an officer they believed to be Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Göring among a group of German officials standing on a bridge over Echternach over the Sauer river Saturday.

NEW YORK SENATE OPPOSES 3RD TERM

Republicans Catch Foes Napping To Pass Resolution.

By The Associated Press

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Republicans of President Roosevelt's home state state railroaded through the legislature today a Democratic resolution memorializing congress to forbid a third term for any President.

Assembly action completed a coup begun last night when Democratic senate leaders were caught sleeping and permitted the resolution to pass without protest on a voice vote.

Republicans, controlling the assembly, 86 to 65, approved the action today 82 to 74 amid cheers from the majority and from the minority group.

Republican assembly majority leader Irvin Ives denied Republican fears of the President's prospects of reelection and declared the resolution should be passed to settle once and for all this third term question."

Assemblyman Irvin D. Davidson, New York City Democrat, asserted the sponsor of the resolution, Senator John J. McNabon, New York City Democrat, was apparently trying to do a signal service for the nation.

McNabon tossed his political bombshell last night. Republican Senate Leader Joe R. Hanley seized opportunity during the absence of seven Democrats and called for an immediate vote.

Republicans, normally outnumbering senate Democrats only 27 to 24, shouted lustily "aye" and Democratic lieutenant governor Charles Poletti declared the resolution passed by voice vote.

Blood Runs Cold

By Ann Demarest

AFTER THIRTY-SEVEN
A Domestic Woman

MAC DONALD began to speak in a low, awful voice.

"He has been plotting years, since Richard and the children I suspected it that I would expose him, not that I would do any good. Richard was dead then, and so was Jean.

Now they are dead and my husband is dying."

At last she stopped. The relief was so intense as to be painful and still no one in the room moved or spoke. I couldn't bear to look at her face, torn with emotion. It wasn't possible to watch anyone suffer so terribly.

From somewhere on the first floor

a voice called for the Sergeant and the tension that held us tenu-ously in suspense increased, just to have Richard call for his brother.

When Norton came upstairs

Sergeant Long said "Mrs. Mac-

Donald isn't very well. See that she gets home safely."

He followed them downstairs and Mary Ann left with a backward glance at Dirk. And now that we were alone we just sat and stared at each other. The last hour had left me shaken and bewildered.

As calmly as I could manage

I said to Dirk, "Would you mind explaining all of this in words of one syllable?" My mind got befogged somewhere along the line.

"It's this way, Chris," he said.

"I was fairly certain all along that it was Mr. Kimball, and finally convinced Richard or almost convinced him. But the Sergeant wouldn't agree with me

because there seemed to be no motivation."

"You're the perfect Watson,"

he said with a smile. "I hit on it when Mr. Kimball showed me some of his antiques and particularly some of his books. He had a passion for collecting the most valuable things, and he didn't want to sell them. You see, Chris, he said, taking my hand. "I tried to buy one of his books, and he just smiled. He wouldn't have parted with it for the world. Just as Mrs. MacDonald said, he was mad about collecting. He wouldn't stop at anything to get what he wanted and," he added soberly,

"he didn't stop. Joan and Richard were in the way, so he got rid of them."

"Where did the necklace come

How to Make a Splendid Cough Remedy at Home

A Big Saving, and It's So Easy! No Cooking!

Cough medicines usually contain a large amount of sugar—sugar is a good ingredient, but one which you can easily make at home. Take 2 cups of granulated sugar and 1 cup of water, and stir for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking! No trouble at all.

Then get from your druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and add your syrup. This gives you a real, truly wonderful medicine for coughs due to colds. It makes a real saving for you, because it gives you about four times as much for your money. It lasts a long time, never spoils, and children love it.

This is actually a surprisingly effective, quick-acting cough remedy. Promptly you'll feel it take hold. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes and makes breathing easier. You've never seen anything better for prompt and pleasing results.

Pinex is a compound containing Nor-pine, a way Pine and palatable gelatine is concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it fails to work.

"And Mary Ann and I had lunch—" I stopped. "You may as well tell me about Mary Ann.

What did she have to do with this?"

Dick lit a fresh cigarette.

"Mary Ann is a very pretty girl,

but, as Richard said, she's a good one to steer clear of. It seems

Richard had dates with her a couple of times and didn't have sense enough to be wary. The red-head got something on him and she was bleeding him for money. She got hold of him the night Joan was murdered to get more out of him; that's why he took a later train. I found her up in his apartment early this afternoon. She said she was looking for some of her letters, but she seemed more interested in his diamond studs. Norton had better watch his step. I think they are chasing around together.

I sighed. "I guess that's all."

Then I sat up. "Who was that man on the fire escape?"

"Whitefield. He used Richard's apartment for an exit when Richard wasn't home. It was harder than the front door, since the police have been after him for a long time. I suppose he came in the front way with that big overcoat on and went out the back in the topcoat."

"Well," I murmured, "Mr. Kimball certainly did a thorough job

of it. Poor Mrs. Evans."

"I guess she got on his nerves, accusing him all of the time. He probably went up to threaten her and she got frightened. Her heart was weak, anyway, Sarah said."

"I wonder what she did know about it?"

Dick shook his head. "I think she kept her eye on everyone, that's all. She knew pretty well what was going on in the house.

She was really a lot smarter than any of the rest of us."

"And little Rollo figured all of this out by himself," I murmured.

"That sounds swell, but it isn't true, unfortunately. Our friend,

Sergeant Long, is probably the smartest man in New York. I guessed that it was Kimball, but he did all the rest."

He looked up abruptly. "What are you staring at?"

"I was just admiring you," I said.

"Chris, I'll swallow every word

I ever said about you. At heart you have the makings of a domestic woman."

"You can't flatter me."

He smiled. "I can feed you though. How about a large dinner?"

I shook my head. "I'm packing.

He stared at me.

"If there's a ship for Bermuda tomorrow I'm taking it. I wouldn't stay in New York for the rest of the winter for the best steak the town has to hawk about.

Snow, sleet, ice." I shuddered.

He sat up. "Is it coincidence or what? It seems to me I read that Tony Maugham is spending the winter in Bermuda."

"Tony," I said, curiously.

"Chris," he said in a stern voice, taking my hand, "are you going to fall for that Wall Street money-lender who spends his winters in Bermuda or are you going to stay in New York where men are men?"

"You're jealous," I said weakly.

He stood up. "Get your hat on, girl. We're going to dinner."

SOME QUICK TRICKS AND PEPPER UPERS

They're Needed in Repertoire of All Good Cooks.

PROGRAM AT PROSPECT

Members of Boy Scout Troop 5, sponsored by Bird-McGinnis Post American Legion, will give a demonstration of scout work at a meeting of the Prospect P.T.A. at Prospect Thursday night. Several scout leaders from Marion are planning to accompany the boys, including Charles M. Howard, scoutmaster of the troop; Fred P. Struthers, area scout executive; Dr. Frank R. Mann, president of the Harding Area council; F. J. Held, Lawrie and Ray Ruffner, commissioners.

The meeting will be held at the Prospect school at 8 o'clock.

PROSPECT PUPILS GIVE

PROGRAM FOR MOTHERS

Special to The Star
PROSPECT, Feb. 27—Mothers and friends of third and fourth grade students at the Prospect school were entertained at a Washington Day tea given by students and teachers Thursday.

The program included patriotic selections by the school's "melody band" and a playlet by students of the third grade. Kenneth Hayes portrayed George Washington during the musical selections. Arrangements were in charge of Misses Mabel Prichard and Bernice Huberman, teachers.

A New Hampshire man has marketed several hundred tons of peat moss, useful for gardeners and poultrymen, from a deposit discovered on his farm while planning to build a fishing pond.

Quick tricks and pepper-uppers should be in the repertoire of every good cook. We have many of our own, which we are glad to share with our friends, as quick tricks for unexpected luncheons are valuable.

Make one with six firm bananas, two tablespoons butter, three tablespoons flour, salt dash of pepper, teaspoon prepared mustard, one-fourth teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, two cups milk, one cup grated American cheese.

Melt butter, add flour and seasoning and stir until smooth. Stir in milk slowly. Add cheese, and cook, stirring constantly until sauce is smooth and thickened. About two cups sauce.

A pepper-upper for cold meals is always welcome, and here's a swell relish of pickles, beets and cabbage. Mix it well and pile it on lettuce cups, and then place around cold meat platter. It's nice with hot meats, too, crisp as a Yankee furlong. Make two cups finely-shredded cabbage, 1/4 cup of chopped pickles, one cup diced celery, French dressing, one cup Julliene beets and two sliced hard-boiled eggs. Combine cabbage, pickles and celery. Add French dressing, tossing lightly. Add beets just before serving and toss lightly. Garnish with eggs and serve with additional dressing.

Indians' Bosses Mixed Up Over Player Trading

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Feb. 27—From scattered sections of the nation came reports today suggesting much confusion in the Cleveland Indians front office.

The hatchet man in the story is C. C. (George Washington) Slapnicka, unsuspected vice president of the club.

He tried to chop a couple players off the Tribal roster.

The "I-can't-tell-a-lie" story opened with the Philadelphia Athletics saying Cleveland offered pitcher Johnny Allen and catcher Frank Hayes (all are holdouts).

This prompted the following: From Cleveland—Alva Bradley, Indians president: "I haven't heard anything about it."

From Cleveland—Frank Kohlbecker, Indians' business manager: "I know nothing of it."

From the Tribal team bound for the Fort Myers, Fla., training camp—Oscar Vitt, Indiana manager: "Get rid of Pytlak? No sir, not unless we get someone mighty good!"

Slapnicka, who early this month blamed his own "absent-mindedness" for letting Joe Vosmik slip out of the American league, silently awaited the Indians at Fort Myers. Then last night he spoke.

"I'm like George Washington caught with the hatchet."

"Yes, I wired Connie Mack and suggested the deal and would like to see it go through."

REPORT 2 SHIPS SUNK IN NORTH

Russia to Germany.

The Pernico district shore now is in hands of the invading Russian army.

At this point, the coasts of Russia and Norway are only a few miles apart. To the east is the Russian port of Murmansk, where a number of German merchant ships took refuge last fall. Several of them, including the liner Bremen, later sailed down the Norwegian coast and reached Germany.

If the newly-reported sinkings occurred in Norwegian waters, Norway might be confronted by another neutrality - threatening case similar to the Altmark incident.

The leading roles in the Thursday night production will be played by Avis Lill, Jean Armbruster, Jean Dixon and Betty Jo Hogue. Friday night the leads will be Marcella Burtsfield, Marilyn Reelley, Carolyn King and Joan Austin.

Seats will be reserved for the Friday night show. Reservations may be made at the high school Wednesday, Thursday and Friday noons. Tickets will be sold at the door both nights.

Miss Dorothy Hanson, director, announced the play will start promptly at 8:15 each night, preceded by a 15-minute program by the high school orchestra under the direction of Homer Huffman.

The one set for the play, an amusing family comedy by Sidney Howard, was constructed by L. E. Welch, employed at the administration building, and four boys of the high school vocational department.

Plans Completed To Begin Sale Of 1940 Automobile Tags Here Friday GIRL SCOUT COOKY SALE DATES FIXED

Five Tons of Plates on Hand at Office; Colors Reversed from 1939 Style.

Orders To Be Taken from March 27 to April 5.

Sale of 1940 automobile license tags will begin Friday and in regular rev. month some 10,000 or 12,000 Marion county cars will have to have new plates if the owners want to drive them.

Five tons of tags plus a few hundred pounds of supplies and blanks of various types are already on hand at the license bureau at 121 West Church street, James E. Messenger, deputy registrar, reported today.

The new plates, white letters and numerals on a background of dark blue, are exactly the reverse of the 1939 plates. They are the same size and weight.

The price too is just the same, ranging from $7 to $16 for passenger automobiles. The price is based on horsepower, all cars up to and including 25 horsepower requiring a $7 tag; from 26 to $1 inclusive, $10; and from $1 up, $16. Truck licenses are based on weight. Motorcycle tags cost $5 and sidecars $1.50. On all license there is a 25-cent fee which goes to the registrar, constituting his sole income for operating the office, paying help and our own salary.

The new plates may be bought anytime beginning March 1. Friday, but they may not be installed on automobiles until March 10. They must be installed by midnight of March 31 if they are to be used. A penalty is provided for use of 1939 plates after that date.

Already a large number of the approximately 8,500 plates on hand have been reserved by persons seeking special low numbers.

LIONS CLUB HEARS TALK BY JUDGE GAST

Duties of Probate and Juvenile Courts Explained.

A talk on the duties and activities of a probate judge was given by Judge Oscar Gast at a luncheon meeting of the Marion Lions club at Hotel Harding yesterday.

Judge Gast reviewed several types of juvenile cases which come into the court and discussed the wide range of cases handled by the court in connection with its probate and juvenile work.

He also explained how several state institutions are operated including the boys industrial school at Lancaster, the girls industrial school at Delaware and the state reformatory at Mansfield. Judge Gast was introduced by Walter D. Moore.

In his talk on Lincoln, Mr. Marsh declared that fate played an important part in Lincoln's nomination and election to the presidency and he cited several occasions when an apparently minor incident had a great influence on Lincoln's career.

As an example, he said that Lincoln's son Robert failed to pass a few of the entrance requirements for Harvard and was sent to a New England preparatory school for special training. Worried about his son's academic progress, Lincoln made a trip to New England. While there spoke before several patriotic and partisan groups and almost instantly won the approval of New England Republicans and anti-slavery crusaders.

Mr. Marsh was accompanied to Marion by William R. Pringle, Cleveland attorney and hobbyist, who also spoke briefly at the club meeting. Mr. Pringle is a collector of pictures of homes, birthplaces and memorials of the presidents.

Mr. Marsh answered several questions about Lincoln which were raised by members of the audience.
